

Gifts of learning

This past Friday, the kindergarten students of West New York Public School No. 2 were all smiles as they walked away with brand new backpack and tons of new school supplies thanks to a group of Memorial High School students.

The gifts were part of the "Back to School Back Pack Program," which was an initiative by the students in Future Educators of America (FEA) and Tomorrow's Teachers classes. Their goal is to enforce the importance of education and giving back to the community. The students sponsored and collected funds for school supplies and 80 backpacks for elementary school children throughout the summer and beginning of September.

FEA members raised funds by reaching out to members of the West New York community, who contributed monetarily and provided supplies including crayons, colored pencils, washable markers, scissors, rulers, glue sticks, small pencil boxes, composition notebooks, folders, erasers, pencils (primary pencils for Kindergarten), and journals.

This initiative by Memorial High School's FEA and Tomorrow's Teachers demonstrates their commitment to uplifting the pursuit of knowledge, compassion, and service to the community.
