NFL Play 60

On October 5, 2010, three current NY Giants, Terrell Thomas (defensive back), Michael Boley (linebacker) and Ramses Barden (wide receiver), visited the West New York Middle School to talk about the NFL PLAY 60 campaign which is designed to tackle childhood obesity by getting kids active through in-school, after-school and team-based programs.

The football players briefly talked about their backgrounds; however, their main mission was to help make kids' lives healthier by just getting them to go outside and play. The students were encouraged to play for 60 minutes every day. The players held a question and answer session where free giveaways were offered to students that answered questions correctly. All the students were very enthusiastic about this exciting event. Click here to view pictures.
